

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Chambers. Senator Matzke.

SENATOR MATZKE: I appreciate your comment on the phrase likely to. In the redraft, we eliminated that from the green copy, and I thank you for your suggestion in that regard. We followed your advice. Again, I believe Senator Chambers' amendment is overbroad and not nearly as specific as the bill as introduced and as amended in my amendment, 3484. So I would ask the body to move this matter along and vote down Senator Chambers' proposed amendment.

PRESIDENT ROBAK: Thank you, Senator Matzke. There are no further lights. Senator Chambers, do you wish to close on your amendment?

SENATOR CHAMBERS: I am going to say like that little guy in the Budweiser commercial, Madam President, yes, I do. In case some of you all didn't see it, this is just one of those beer commercials, this little fellow is walking through the airplane terminal, and there are people standing there with cards and the names of the individuals on them. So this little fellow looks at one of the guys and he says, do you have Bud Light, or whatever it is, in your limousine, and the guy says, yes, I do. So he studies very hard the name and he says, well, I am Mr. Galliwekitch (phonetic), and the guy says, Dr. Gallokowitz (phonetic), he says, yes, I am. Whatever he had to be to get into that limo where they had this beer he was going to be in there. Then he is sitting, sprawled in the back seat, just looking at all of the luxuriousness of this limousine and he starts pulling levers and pushing buttons and the little window between the driver and the passenger is going up and down, up and down, so the guy with a very contemptuous look on his face turns around, looks over his shoulder at the little fellow and says, first time in a limo, Doctor. And the little fellow says, a limo this small, and he continues to push the buttons. Here is what I have to say, Senator Matzke, do you want this bill? Yes, I do. Senator Matzke, if the right way to spell this bill is Gallokowitz, are you willing to settle for Galliwekitch; Senator Matzke, yes, I am. First time Senator Matzke writing a criminal statute; first time writing one as unconstitutional as this. Sometimes we use parody, we use similes, but, anyway, the amendment before you I know is going to be rejected. I know it, there is no question about it, but rather than just give arguments on the floor, I wanted something printed in the
